The improvement will be mainly in the line of harbor defence, as Mexico cannot afford and does not want a navy for offensive purposes and has no colonial possessions.

What Mexico most needs, in the cpinto of Captein Azets, and of President Dia also, is submarine torpedo boats of the Holland class, a number of which will probably be ordered. Captain Azeta says the American naval officers did all in their power to furnish him with information as to the questions he wanted to investigate.

A MOTHER'S AWFUL DEED

Shoots Her Three Children and Then Commits Suicide.

Terrible Tragedy Enneted in New Yerk-Two of the Parent's Victims Already Dead-Prompted by an Insane Impulse - Every Precaution Taken to Make Sure of Her Work.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 .- Mrs. Lillian Smith shot her three children, killing two of them, and then with the same pistol committed suicide at Kingsbridge today. A fit of temporary insanity, apparently due to nervous trouble of long standing, drove her to the deed. Of the children, eight-year-old Andrew seems to have died almost instantly. Mabel, four years old, expired in Fordham Hospital tonight. The eldest daughter, Ethel, who is thirteen years old, is in the hospital severely wounded, but the doctors say that she will recover, though to make death certain after the shooting the mother attempted to force carbolic acid into the mouths of the wound-between 3 and 4 o'clock. Mrs. Smith had been under the care of Dr. James W. Cassell for the last five months. Her husband, Walter M. Smith, had also been in poor health. This morning Mr. Smith was driven by his wife to the elevated station at 155th Street. She kissed him good-bye and seemed more than usually tender in her farewell, and told him to be sure to come home early. At 3 o'clock in the afterneon she sent her coachwan, Curtis Moore, and his wife Mary out for a drive, saying she did not need

Half an hour later they returned, but were met at the door by Mrs. Smith, who waved them away and said that they must stay out longer. As soon as they had screaming. Finding no one on the lower floor, she went up stairs. There she found the two girls lying together in their bedroom. Mrs. Smith lay in a room adjoining. The floors and furniture were spattered with blood. The coachman's wite called her husband. He summoned the police. and an ambulance from Fordham Hospital was hurried to the house. The boy and the mother were dead. Little Mabel was moan-ing in agony, and was evidently beyond recovery, but she and Ethel, the eldest girl, were taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Smith Pad evidently arranged every detail of the tragedy with the clearest forethought. Powder-charred spots on the clothing covering the children's bodies showed that she had sought their hearts and bad placed the pistol close against that part of their bodies. On the mouth of Mabel was found traces of carbolic acid, and the child's skin was burned. Ethel's arm and forehead were also seri-cusly burned by the acid. An empty twoounce bottle which had contained the stuff was found on the floor. The pistol, a cheap affair with five chambers, lay beside Mrs. Smith with three of the cham bers empty. The woman, after discharg-ing five bullets, had evidently loaded it again and fired three times more.

A letter addressed to Mr. Smith explained that for days she had been driven on by an irresistible impulse to kill herself and her children; that today it had overcome her and she must yield to it.

THE MILITARY ACADEMY.

the War Department.

Adjutant General Corbin yesterday isued the report of the Board of Visitors to West Point for the year 1900, as received by the Secretary of War. The report makes many recommendations, and favors the in-rease of the corps of cadets.

The board met at West Point on June 1, not organized by the choice of Gen.
Charles F. Manderson as president, Col. Dudley Evans and Prof. David P. Houston vice presidents, and Col. William C.

Church, secretary,

The board reports as a result of its examination and enquiries that the United States Military Academy is in all its de-partments in a condition to commend it to the confidence of the President and the country, and to the favor of Congress. It is considered unfortunate by the board that so much time during the first year is of necessity devoted to the study of elementary subjects, and for the pur-pose of obviating this necessity recom-mend that the standard of admission be

It is recommended that the $100 deposit required of cadets admitted into the Academy be made obligatory, for ex-perience has demonstrated the fact that the cadet who enters without making the deposit and depends upon his pay to re-imburse the quartermaster for ad-vances, must continue hopelessly insolvent for at least the first two years of is course at the Academy.

The board is thoroughly impressed with provision for the increase made under re-cent legislation, in the numerical strength of the Corps of Cadets. This necessitates the enlargement of several buildings now at the post and the construction of some new ones. These changes are set forth in detail and the necessity for same clearly and convincingly enumerated. It is esti-mated that the amount required to make these several additions and improvements is less than one-sixth of the amount now eing expended at Annapolis.

The report concludes with the statement that whatever may be said to the disadvantage of the Academy at West Point by those not in sympathy with its purposes, no one can examine into its methods as this Board of Visitors has done without being satisfied that it is on the whole admirably fulfilling the purposes of its creation, and that it is in every way worthy of the most liberal treatment on the part of Congress.

"For," says the board, "were the contingency of war more remote than it is, the time and expenditure devoted to dethe time and expenditure devoted to de-veloping such high ideas of patriotism, of public duty, and manly honor as are found here would be well expended. As it is, we would better spare almost any other institution for the instruction of youth than the Military Academy and its kindred school at Annapolis."

THE PRESIDENT'S RETURN. With Mrs. McKinley He Will Arrive on Tuesday.

President and Mrs. McKinley are expected to arrive in Washington on Tuesday morning. They will leave Canton Monday afternoon, and will probably reach here about 8 o'clock on the following day. Nothing is known here regarding his plans, but Canton despatches indicate that the President will perhaps make one or two trips back to Canton before election. He will doubtless return to the Ohio town on election day to register his vote. As Congress will convene in about two months, the preparation of his message is expected to take much of his time beween now and then.

ian Cinims. It was intimated at the State Department yesterday that the action of the Sultan of Turkey in deciding to withdraw All Ferrouh Bey, the Minister here, was brought about by the persistent refusal of the Porte to pay the Armenian claims of $100,000, and the subsequent strained re-lations. It is said that the Minister was withdrawn at the request of the United tates Government. This Government has not sent a Minis-ter to Constantinople since the return of Oscar Straus, and it is reasonably certain that none will be sent, so long as the Sultan continues in his present position. It is understood that the American Charge to Turkey, Mr. Griscom, suggested to the Sultan the advisability of withdrawing Ali Ferrouh Bey pending a settlement of the question, and on that advice the Porte recently announced his purpose of recall-nople, will be sent here as Charge. His arrival, however, will be a matter of slight importance, as the State Department is having little dealings with the Turkish Legation. Had it not been for the Chinese embroelle the Government.

THE ECONOMIC SOCIETY

The Quantitative Theory of Money the Subject Discussed.

Addresses by Secretary Gage, George E. Roberts, Director of the Mint, and Prof. Joseph French Johnson -Effect of the Volume of the Medium on Prices of Commodities.

The Washington Economic Society, The Washington Economic Society, formed last November to discuss politicaleconomic subjects, resumed its work for the fall last evening. The meeting was held in the red parlors of the Ebbitt House. Each of the members, numbering nearly sixty, was privileged to invite a friend, and in consequence the parlors were well filled. Owing to an erroneous announcement that the session would be public, a number of persons called with the expectation of hearing the discussions. In conformity with the established rule of the society, however, admission was limited as usual to members and in vited friends.

They were followed by other members in short speeches. Secretary Gage in his address reviewed the history of money from the time when all transactions were carried on with an immediate exchange of cash. He traced the development of credit, which at present is the largest factor in all business en-terprises. He dwelt upon the growth of modern business methods whereby, through credit, $1 in coin is made to serve the public perhaps ten times over at the same time. Touching on the quantitative theory of money as stated by the classic school headed by John Stuart Mill, Mr. Gage de-clared that the definition should be re-stated. He was not prepared to accept the old formula that there was a direct and absolute relation between the volume of money and prices. He pointed out the increased operations of credit, which, he declared, make money so useful that the Mill definition cannot be accepted outright. The rapidity of circulation also is an element, said Mr. Gage, which must enter into a right consideration of the quanti-tative theory. In conclusion he declared that while there is a relation between the volume of money and prices, yet it is not arbitrarily fixed. The element of credit, which is capable of increasing indefinitely difficult for that reason to define what is disputed in the quantitative theory of money. I suppose there can be no better statement of the broad theory than that made by John Stuart Mill that the value of money, other things being the same, is in the inverse ratio of its quantity; an increase lowering its purchasing power and a decrease advancing it in ex-act proportions. To double the quan-tity of money would double prices and to halve the quantity would cut prices in two. This is because money as money has no other use than to but things. If the number of things for sale remains the same, and the demand for them the same, but the medium of purchase is doubled in quantity, it must ultimately be that each purchase will necessarily absorb twice as much money as before.

"When all the productive forces of a country are employed, when every man has work, that country is doing all the business it can, and using all the money it can. At the existing scale of prices, with the mines of Australia producing at their present rate, gold would pile up in the bunks without demand for it. The interest rate on loans would go down, and the own-ers of money would look about for some-thing that paid better. If the interest rate on loans went down to 2 or 3 per cent and a certain railway continued to pay 6 or 8 per cent dividends the selling price of its stock, that is, the money value of the rail-way, would go up correspondingly, and eventually, if practicable, there would be another railway built. All property that was earning better returns than money at interest would be in demand, and every in-vestment that could be duplicated or multirlled would be. This would cause an in creased demand for labor, and result in higher wages and thus gradually a new level of values would be established. The advance of wages and commodities would continue until it increased the cost of mining so that ores of lowest grade could no longer be worked.

"With the excessive supply thus cut off continue until it increased the
